Latest News

SCOAP³ recently celebrated the publication of the 10,000th article funded by the consortium since the start of operations in 2014. Authors from over 90 countries have benefited from immediate Open Access for their publications, making SCOAP³ the largest international Open Access initiative, that operates in collaboration with multiple society and commercial publishers. In addition to availability on the publishers' platforms, articles are also available for automated querying via the SCOAP³ Repository, enabling partners to build value-added services.

Partnership Activity

The SCOAP³ Governing Council held its sixth meeting on March 18th 2016. Delegates representing 38 countries and intergovernmental organisations met virtually to finalise the extension of SCOAP³.

The following decisions were taken unanimously:

- SCOAP³ will continue for a second three-year phase from 2017-2019;
- The list and conditions for eight continuing journals were confirmed, including five society journals;
- The budget for the 3-year extension was approved;
- The principles for apportioning this budget amongst the participating countries and CERN were confirmed.

After discussion with one publisher failed to come to an agreement on sustainable pricing, two journals partially participating in the first phase of SCOAP³, Journal of Cosmology and Astroparticle Physics and New Journal of Physics will no longer have their HEP content funded by SCOAP³ as of January 2017. Together, these journals accounted for less than 5% of articles published to date.

Tech Corner

A fully redesigned SCOAP³ website went online on March 15th at the existing address: <http://scoap3.org>. The migration was smooth.

The new site's modern and user-friendly design allows for better navigation, includes more details about the partnership governance and features additional sections such as FAQs (Frequently Asked Questions) and other downloadable Resources.
